THE WEATHER

There has been but little change in the temperature distribution during the last 24 hours.

The temperature is still abnormally high in the plains states and the west gulf states. On the Texas coast, a maximum temperature of 100 degrees, the highest ever recorded at the station, was observed Tuesday afternoon. The heated spell has come to an end in the Ohio valley, the lake region and the middle Mississippi valley.

Except for local rains in the gulf states and Florida, the weather will be fair throughout the Washington forecast district during the next 48 hours. Temperature will rise to normal and above in northern districts Thursday.

The winds along the north Atlantic will be moderate northwest, fair weather. Middle Atlantic moderate north to northeast under cloudy weather.

Forecast.

New England: Fair Wednesday and Thursday, somewhat warmer Thursday.

Observations in Norwich.

The following records, reported from Dunn's pharmacy, show the changes in temperature and the barometric changes Tuesday:

ment a Great Success — Personal Mention.

The president of the Girls' Friendly society of St. Andrew's Episcopal church in making a report says that the concert held at the church Guild room on behalf of the Girls' Friendly Red Cross Motor Ambulance, was a complete success and that not only was the sixteen dollar assessment met but that there was an excess of twenty-six dollars. This extra money has been given to and acknowledged by the local Red Cross chapter.

FUNERAL

Miss Eliza Mathews.

The funeral of Miss Eliza Mathews was held Tuesday afternoon from her late home at 428 Bennett avenue with a good attendance. There were many beautiful pieces of flowers. Rev. Joseph F. Cobb officiated. The bearers were four brothers of the deceased.

Burial was in Hickory street cemetery where Rev. Mr. Cobb read a committal service at the grave. Undertaker C. A. Gager, Jr., was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Miss Mathews passed away Saturday, June 16th, after a long illness. She is survived by her aged mother, four brothers, Arthur, Thomas, William and George, one niece, Miss Myra M.
Mathews, and two nephews, Harry and Frank Mathews.

Been Dissolved.

The Norwich Industrial Building Co., which erected the so-called industrial building on Central wharf a number of years ago and followed it with a second building, has recently dissolved and gone out of business.

The first industrial building was erected in 1852 and was followed a few years later by the second, which was built on reclaimed land which was under water at the time the first building was built.

MAKES AWARD IN MOOSEHOP CASE

Commissioner Donohue Finds For Widow in Compensation Claim — Frank Asselin, Woolen Mill Employee, Was Fatally Injured While Walking Railroad Track to Get Tools at His Home.

Compensation under the workmen's compensation act is allowed to Mrs.
Mary Jane Asselin, widow of Frank Asselin of Moosehup, in a decision rendered on Tuesday by Commissioner J.
J. Donohue after two hearings in the case. The insurance company for the American Woolen company of Moosehup by whom Asselin was employed, admitted the claim that the fatal injury to the man was caused by negligence in the course of his employment, but contended that he did not arise out of his employment and they also claimed that Asselin was guilty of willful and serious misconduct.

Asselin was fatally injured on the afternoon of Jan. 31, 1918, when he was struck by an engine while he was crossing the railroad tracks near his home or walking along the banks and taking a bank to go to his home to get his own axe to do some work with at the mill. He was about 53 years old and been in the employ of the company for many years as a general laborer.

Commissioner Donohue finds in favor of the dependent widow as the claimant and rules that she is entitled to compensation, which is ordered to be paid in a lump sum for 312 weeks at the rate of $4.44 per week, with medical bills and $100 for funeral expenses.

Memorandum of Decision.

In his memorandum of decision which discusses the important legal points involved, Commissioner Donohue supports his rulings by numerous references to precedents and says in part as follows:

The two points up for consideration in this case are, first, did the injury arise out of the employment; and, second, was the employee guilty of serious and willful misconduct.

As to the first question, it is admitted by the respondent that the injury arose in the course of employment. The evidence shows that when the employee met his death it occurred at a time when he was engaged in a work which was in fact to be done at the mill. He was engaged in "doing something which he was frequently in the habit of doing; that is, he was going home to procure an axe with which he felt he could do better work or which he felt he could use more readily than a similar tool furnished by the employer. His employer contended in this matter that this occasion and had in the past, and it was a well known fact to his employer that he had used his own tools before and was in the habit of using them and of going home for them when needed, and no objection had been made to his using them and the respondents admitted they had no reason to object to his using his own tools if he preferred. On this occasion he had been told to get his axe to sharpen for use the next day, and it was known to the employer that the respondent would be coming to work the next day and that he would be using the axe at his own home, and whether he was told to go home for his axe or simply to get his axe is immaterial, and the loss farther, who told him to get his axe, admitted that he expected when he gave this order that the employee would prefer to use his own axe and that he would go home for it. What the respondent did not know was that the employee had been in the habit of doing during his entire employment with the company and which he had knowledge of, and the entire course of procedure on this occasion was what they could have expected him to do and what they actually did expect him to do as is shown by the testimony of the witnesses for the respondents.

In Hours of Employment.

The fatal accident occurred during the hours in which he was supposed and expected to be in the employ of the respondent company, and he was on pay during those hours. The route which he took to go home was a short one, and if any advantage was to be accrued to anybody it was to accrue to the employer by his taking this route, and he was, even though it was admittedly dangerous, and he could not appear to have been a man who ever went home during his working hours for any purpose other than that of doing something for his employer's interest.

He was ordered at this particular time to procure an axe, and as one of the witnesses said in the first part of his testimony, "to go home and get an axe," I believe that that was what was actually told him and that was what was really expected of him, to go home and get his axe, something which had been going on during his entire employment with the respondent company.

In view of the foregoing circumstances and the orders given him, and also in view of the fact that on this occasion he had proceeded as he had at numerous other times with the company's full knowledge of just how he proceeded, and the testimony of the decedent's injury was received in any other way than that of arising both out of and in the course of his employment.

So far as the injury arising out of the employment is concerned, it is clearly evident that it did so arise for the decedent at the time he met his death while doing something which he was employed to do at the time, namely, he was procuring a tool which he had been told to go by his foreman, and was doing it during the hours of his regular employment, and for his employer's interest, and there was a connection between the conditions under which the work was to be performed and the resulting injury. In the present case the decedent's home was nearer to his place of employment probably than was the case with any other employees for the same respondent, and the testimony of the witnesses for the respondents clearly shows that the respondent had full knowledge of the decedent's preference for his own tools, of the fact that he often went home to get them and that he continually went by the short route, the railroad track, and although he had been cautioned and advised not to proceed by that route, no established rule is found to have existed or been enforced by the employer, and no employee had been penalized for walking the tracks.

As to Misconduct.

In deciding the two questions in dispute in the present case, that is the question of the injury arising out of the employment and the question of whether the decedent was guilty of serious and willful misconduct to a certain extent they must be treated separately as they are two distinct questions of serious and willful misconduct it must necessarily be considered in connection more or less with the first question and not entirely independently of it. Up to this point I have endeavored to deal with the question of whether the injury in question arose out of the decedent's employment, as that is the first claim made by the respondents and for the reasons set forth, and the authorities cited on this particular point, I feel justified in ruling as I have.

Careless Use of Soap Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully. If you want to keep your hair looking its best, avoid soaps and prepared hair preparations that contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is that ordinary mild coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy leather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified coconut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

ROCKWELL STREET'S IMPROVED SIDEWALK

Does Away With Puddly Stretch That Academy Students Remember.

Work on the widening and improvement of Rockwell street between Mc-Kieley avenue and Crescent street has progressed so far by the street department that the new granite sidewalk is just about completed and the crushed stone foundation for the road bed under the street has all been laid and rolled down.

Generations of Academy students, who, winter and summer, have splashed through the deep puddles that every rain or snow made in this stretch of walk will agree that no greater improvement was ever made in the city; and the peculiar thing about this piece of work, which has sometimes been called the worst in the city, is that a large part of the time it was city property and belonged to the city to take care of.

Various city administrations have gone to spasms of indignation about the poor condition of privately owned walks in different parts of the city, but none ever thought to remedy the hollows and puddles of the old flag walk from McKieley avenue to Crescent street along which, especially in winter and early spring, it was a case of problems in navigation for every Academy student who passed that way.
